Research

My research interests are in international political theory, political theory, and international peace and security. I am writing on the international political theory of Realism and the English School and issues of religion, ethics, diplomacy, and agency in international politics. Asking what practical philosophy can contribute to understanding international politics, my research interrogates the philosophical and anthropological roots of political and international political theory and violence, human rights, the agency of individuals, and international institutions. My work also focuses on foreign policy, diplomacy, international cooperation, and international organizations.
